MY NAME IS LORITA HAVEALETA

I believe that teaching a child begins from the day they are born, because they are the future leaders of our country,

ABOUT ME

I am married with 6 children. The eldest is 18 and is graduating from high school this year and my youngest is 4 turning 5 this year and will be starting Primary school soon. My home is a stand-alone house with a garden in the front, and also a deck area apart from the house that is fenced. There are small stairs going up to my front door. A small removable gate has been put in the front which is closed during school hours for the children's safety.

MY VALUES

I am a Sunday School teacher and very involved with my local Beach Haven community, as well as my Tongan community. I have always been involved in the care of young children whether they are my own or with my friends, extended family or church community. I love being outdoors and keeping fit and active and I love to have fun to explore outdoor environments. I make sure that my programme offers plenty of opportunities for this with the children. I am Mormon and strongly believe in the importance of family and that learning begins at home. Core values such as respect, love and empowerment are taught at home, as well as in my home-based service. These form a foundation for our young learners to be confident in any setting. My goal is to help in our children's early learning so that they can be successful in all aspects of life as they grow.
